Jesse, I would use this when you need to but also understand this is an opportunity for major prescribers. Guys doing 20-25 scripts for a a period of 6 months or so. If you have someone interested we can schedule a visit, see the pharmacy etc. But be very careful as well. We do not want to create a sense that it is attainable without alot of prescribing. Thanks

Jesse,

You bet. Dangle the investment carrot is a great strategy and should be utilized often. I just wanted to clarify in case you weren't clear on how it works.

BTW, I hear you had a few other RX's come in. Great job amigo. Keep it up and let me know when I can help.

Thanks, Weston.

He is aware that he needs to write more. However, I don't want to put the cart before the horse.

Have you guys had success dangling the investment oppty as a carrot to docs so that they generate more scripts? I realize that this goes against the spirit of being an investor.

He's my friend; but this is business. No hard feelings if he doesn't write.

Thanks, guys.

Jesse,

I am glad to hear he your friend is interested in the investment opportunity with Omni. Send me his address and I will send him an investment packet for review.

As an FYI... He needs to start writing more RX's to make sure it is a good fit for him and his patients before Omni can offer an investment opportunity. Typically it is at least 6 months of writing RX's before a provider is offered the opportunity to invest. Let me know if there is anything additionally I can do to help.

Weston,

This is a text from my doctor buddy in Louisiana. I copied and sent it to you in a text, but just remembered that you took your phone swimming. So, here it is again:

From my doctor buddy (he is SLOWLY coming around to writing): I need it on paper with reimbursement schedule. I want 1st reimbursement level stock. My CFP/atty needs to review and approve.
